BOBBY SOCKS

Back everyone, after a wonderful holiday season, a few days to go before the new year. We were supposed to be in the hospital here.

When I have thought old S. was the same school Wednesday. If you didn't know what was going on, hardly anyone was in full uniform, as we had school pictures taken and they are in color. Had to wear lively looking colors.

When we walked into the class Monday morning everyone was looking at me. That Monday was so close. Will be back starting Monday. Every day, back already starting to forget the lessons back in their heads so that they won't have to learn those brains.

Our favorite pet around the school whom you have already seen in one way or another, seems to have had a visit to the vet during the holidays. Instead of enjoying them like any other human dog would. Yes, Beauty found that she has a slight case of kidney trouble which gave her a bit of fever along with it.

Slater has thinks she needs a little exercise to regain her health so she dresses her up in her green sweater and takes her for a walk in the fresh morning air.

There are some new loves that I heard about when I got back Monday. Don't know if they are new or old. Billy and Marjorie and Patsy and David.

Those who can are bringing some of their presents which Santa Claus left under the tree to show to the girls. Some have radios like Johnny, Rosalie and Don. Others have new cars to show around in like Janet for one. Judy is riding around in a

Let Us Resolve

Open Letter To Mississippians

It has long been the custom among God-fearing men to make good resolutions at the turn of the year. We usually take an inventory of our shortcomings and achievements and then face the challenges and promises that lie before.

No statistics are needed to confirm the fact that Mississippi is in the throes of an agricultural and industrial revolution and revival. By diversifying crops and mechanizing operations, Mississippi farms become fewer and larger, and although industrial development is in its early stages, it already changes the economy and living habits of her people.

Reforestation grows in favor, and oil and gas fields multiply to give Mississippi a much-needed financial transfusion. Alert communities are on their toes as never before to boost commercial and cultural progress within the state.

To take immediate and full advantage of Mississippi's reawakening, and the opportunities it presents, we recognize the need for the creation of a climate still more conducive to investing capital, the necessity for working together in unity and with sympathetic understanding, a tax structure fair to all alike, and strict enforcement of our laws without fear or favor. We must have harmonious living conditions in which both business and workers may prosper. Our American system of private enterprise cannot survive without a fair profit.

Millions of idle dollars in America seek profitable investments in fields where they may enjoy the encouragement to compete in a free market. And millions of people are looking for locations where they may better themselves, in surroundings favorable to the formation of families and for the rearing of children. Whatever is best for us today must also be good for the rising generations.

Let us resolve then with the New Year to provide in Mississippi both a business climate and an environment under which capital and children may thrive, where men and money may multiply and prosper.

Let us resolve to make Mississippi an inviting place on earth for those who seek a living. By encouraging economic freedom, by putting our hand and shoulder to the task of our purpose, we can make Mississippi a place of promise and plenty in the years ahead and of happiness. These are our objectives.

Central Miss. Eye To Asphyx Of Parents

The highest outbreak in South Central Mississippi is the pay-off for the parents of parents, said Dr. Duane Blakely today from Collins, where he is directing large-scale medical measures in Covington and surrounding counties.

The state director of preventable disease control reported that the public health departments in all threatened areas have gone on emergency schedules in order to provide for special immunization clinics, field investigation and epidemiologic services without regard to hours or holidays.

Extra personnel have been recruited and other personnel diverted to an all-out effort to halt the spread of this highly contagious disease that has already taken two lives.

"Private physicians are working closely and effectively with the health departments in locating cases and carriers and giving immunizations to great numbers of patients," stated Dr. Blakely.

"The close liaison between private medical and public health facilities has provided a most effective surveillance system as well as total commitment of all medical resources in order to meet and overcome the threat," he reported confidently.

At the same time the preventable disease control expert decried the complacency of parents in permitting their children to grow up without protection against diphtheria.

He said that the essential components conducive to the development of unusually high numbers of diphtheria cases in some areas were apparent to health officials early in the fall of 1957. Consequently health depts. throughout the state have been aggressively advancing immunization programs in order to raise the general level of immunity.

"Up until November, the total number of diphtheria cases remained at unusually low levels, and thousands of parents ignored public health appeals to immunize their children," he related.

"But any sense of complacency was rudely broken by the explosive outbreak of the disease in Simpson County before Thanksgiving. This outbreak was characterized by sudden progression of symptoms, development of myocarditis and early death or prolonged convalescence."

The state department of health moved in to aid the local health workers, and with the assistance of epidemiology specialists from the Public Health Service, began intensive control measures. Health carriers of the same virulent strain were found.

But, despite efforts to extend mass immunization programs, the public response was not heavy, according to Dr. Blakely.

"Sporadic cases of diphtheria followed in surrounding counties. But the sudden appearance of several cases, and suspected cases in Covington County last week, has served to focus public attention on the danger of the situation," said Dr. Blakely.

"Now all health departments in South Central Mississippi are experiencing an unusual number of new phenomena. The crowds at some offices seeking immunization are over-running the buildings and backing up outside. Phys-

State Banks Serve Farmers

The substantial service to farmers by Mississippi banks is reflected in a current report which shows that these private organizations serve farmers with far more intermediate-term credit than any other group of lenders including federal agencies. More than 90 per cent of all insured commercial banks in Mississippi are serving agricultural credit needs. At the start of this year, Mississippi bankers were helping farmers to the tune of $61,094,000 in loans. The impressive total included $34,046,000 in production loans and $27,048,000 in agricultural mortgages.

For Little Theatre Play

Preparations are underway for the Bay St. Louis Theatre's forthcoming production of "Speaking of Murder." Produced by Samuel French, Inc. and directed by our own Mrs. Adeline Samuels, this play is scheduled for presentation at the Little Theatre early in March. Primary reading for parts will take place at the theatre, 3 P. M. Sunday, Jan. 11 and anyone interested in taking one of the parts in the play is cordially invited by the Little Theatre directorate to attend this reading and try out their talent. They will be warmly welcomed and given every opportunity.

"Speaking of Murder" was first presented at the Royale Theatre, New York City, in 1956, and was an immediate success. To give an idea of this type of case needed for the production we give below a list of characters in order of their appearance. Ricky Ashton—Nine year old son of Charles Ashton. Connie Barnes Ashton—Charles Ashton's second wife. In her early thirties and very attractive.

WINTER CARE OF LIVESTOCK

Here are some tips on good winter care of your livestock in Hancock County:

1. Use small grains, ryegrass, crimson clover, fescue and other winter grazing crops for beef cattle, sheep and hogs.
2. Where such grazing is not available, see and provide a good winter feed. All calves to be sold for feeder sales. 3. Vaccinate for hog cholera and other diseases. 4. Treat pigs for roundworm. 5. Feed pigs for spring sale. 6. Put ewes close to lambing. 7. Make sure lambs nurse immediately after birth. 8. Treat naval cords of lambs with iodine at birth. 9. Dock and castrate all lambs before they are 15 days old. 10. Start creep feeding lambs as soon as possible. 11. See that all classes of livestock have shelter and bedding and extra bedding.

OTHER WINTER TIPS

1. Make plans for making any decisions regarding the sale of your cotton. 2. Do not plan all your storage, release to the county to who might want extra. Study carefully the advantages and disadvantages of "A" and plan "B" which is for you. Then if you have any you can spend it repaying loans and barn repairs and new fences.

Mauldin-Clay Wedding Solemnized in Laurel Sunday, December 21st.

The Sharon Baptist Church, Laurel, Miss., was the scene of a pretty holiday wedding at three o'clock Sunday afternoon, December 21st, when Miss Gloria Clay, exchanged vows with Talmage Lamar Mauldin. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Clay of Laurel. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Mauldin of Laurel.

After Miss Nell Mauldin, sister of the groom, rendered a program of nuptial music and played the accompaniment for Mrs. Pete McQueen when she sang "I Love You Truly" and "Because," the Rev. Elzy Moss performed the double ring ceremony before a background of potted palms. Centering the wedding scene was an arch of cathedral candles in iron floor candelabra and princess baskets of white gladioli.

The bride entered the Church on the arm of her father who gave her in marriage. She was
